

SACCO AND VANZETTI TO DIE ONE WEEK FROM TODAY

GOVERNOR'S
STUDY FINDS
MEN GUILTY

Says Delays in Their Execution Are Inexcusable.

BULLETIN

Boston, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti showed no outward signs of dismay when they were informed this morning of Gov. Fuller's decision not to interfere in their case.

Attorney Thompson was accompanied on his visit to the condemned men by Mrs. Rose Sacco.

Mrs. Sacco remained calm and displayed more fortitude than on her visit to her husband yesterday. Thompson refused to make a statement and gave no intimation as to what course the defense would take.

Boston, Aug. 4.—(AP)—One week from today Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti's seven year battle to escape death for murder, which has echoes in every country, will end in the electric chair, unless their counsel can discover an avenue of appeal to the federal courts.

The possibility is admittedly slender.

Governor Fuller last night closed their last hope of escape through intervention of the judicial or executive branches of the government by rejecting their plea for clemency. He declared he concurred with the jury which tried them in 1927, in the belief they were murderers of F. A. Parmenter, South Braintree paymaster, and A. Berardelli, his guard. He further asserted that their trial had been fair and just and that he saw no reason for granting a rehearing.

Dilatory Methods.

"The crime was committed seven years ago," the Governor said. "For six years through dilatory methods, one appeal after another, every possibility for delay has been utilized, all of which lends itself to attempts to frighten and coerce witnesses, to influence changes in testimony, to multiply by the years of time elapsed the possibilities of error and confusion."

"It might be said that by undertaking this investigation I have contributed to the elaborate consideration accorded these men. My answer is that there is a feeling on the part of some people that the various delays that had dragged this case through the courts for six years were evidence that a doubt existed as to guilt. The feeling was not justified. The persistent determined efforts of an attorney of extraordinary versatility and industry the judge's illness, the election efforts of three district attorneys and dilatory tactics on the part of most of those concerned, are the principal causes of delay. The delays are inexcusable."

Three To Death Chair

The condemned men slept last night in the shadow of the chair. With them was Celestino Madaleno whose "confession" exonerating Sacco and Vanzetti and implicating a Providence, R. I., gang in the murders was rejected by Gov. Fuller. He will go to the chair next week on the expiration of the latest of a series of respite grants in his order that his testimony might be available.

While extra guards were thrown about the state house, the governor, the prison and about many of those who have been connected with the case, in anticipation of possible reprisals, counsel for all three condemned men worked frantically seeking new loopholes to stay their execution.

The defense committee, which has expended hundreds of thousands of dollars contributed by sympathizers in every corner of the globe, declared it would fight until the last.

It characterized the governor's decision as "unbelievably brutal."

Crowds Unexcited

W. G. Thompson, senior defense counsel, expressed regret but withheld detailed comment of announcement of future plans until he had studied the Governors decision.

Crowds which had watched newspaper bulletin boards throughout the night for the announcement received the news with scarcely a murmur.

Sacco and Vanzetti refused their breakfast this morning unaware that their appeal had failed.

It was not expected that they would be informed of the decision until their counsel visited them later.

on Sacco Ruling

New Haven, Conn.—Mrs. Sarah Berardelli, widow of the man for whose death Sacco and Vanzetti have been condemned to die, today branded as spurious a telegram sent to Gov. Fuller over her name last week urging clemency. She said she did not write the telegram and did not send it, but that not long ago she had been asked if she wanted to see innocent men put to death and had replied, "I do not want to see anyone punished who was innocent."

NAVAL PARLEY
FAILED; ENDS
LONG SESSION

Friendly Greetings Expressed at End of Conference.

Geneva, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The tripartite naval conference came to an unsuccessful end today. After nearly seven weeks of discussion, the delegates of the United States, Great Britain and Japan found themselves unable to agree on the limitation of cruisers, destroyers and submarines which was the object of the conference.

A last moment attempt was made by Great Britain today to rescue something from the wreckage of the conference when W. C. Bridgeman, chief British delegate, proposed an agreement restricted to destroyers and submarines.

Hugh S. Gibson, head of the American delegation, declined to entertain this suggestion, which was presented at a secret session of the delegates held at midday, on the ground that the United States considers the limitation of cruisers, destroyers and submarines as one indivisible whole.

IN FRIENDLY FINISH.

London, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A Geneva dispatch to Reuters, the British news agency, says that the conference plenary session today closed in the friendliest manner after a few complimentary words by the heads of the British and Japanese delegations in favor of Hugh S. Gibson, chief of the American delegation who returned his thanks.

MUST PLAN PROGRAM.

Washington, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Collapse of the Geneva conference leaves the Washington government where it was when the conference was called by President Coolidge.

The administration faces the problem of mapping out and putting through congress a naval building program based on an estimate of the needs of national security. Whatever may be the "big navy" strength developed in the new congress, it is taken for granted that the administration will not approve a cruiser program aimed at exceeding or even equalling the announced British intentions.

The administration attitude is said not to be apt to be influenced by the fact that high administration officials have been frank to say privately that they were wholly unable to understand or explain the size of the British cruiser program as revealed at Geneva. They are described as feeling that the British arguments failed to support the construction of some twenty-five to thirty-five cruisers necessary for reasonable security of British essential trade routes. In view of that feeling, it is a natural corollary that officials here ascribe the failure of the conference directly to this British policy.

Spring Valley Men
Fined Heavily Here

John Massa and Sam Reeling ignored to Dixon from Spring Valley Tuesday evening to enjoy the night with friends in a "summer cottage" by the river side and at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning as they passed through Dixon on their trip, Massa was arrested for driving his car while intoxicated and Reeling was taken on the charge of intoxication. The arrests were made by Officer Pomeroy and in the car the officer found a bottle containing liquor. Neither man claimed the liquor. When arrested both men were so far under the influence of liquor that they had to be locked up until late in the afternoon before being sober enough to appear in court. About 4 o'clock Massa and Reeling appeared before Justice of the Peace Gehant and entered pleas of guilty. The Justice fined Massa $100 and costs and Reeling $10 and costs.

Having no money to settle the fines, the officers attached the automobile until the men could go to LaSalle to procure the cash.

CLAY, KY., KNOWN DEAD, NINE MINERS
MISSING IN EXPLOSION IN CLAY,
KY., MINE LATE WEDNESDAY P. M.

BULLETIN

Clay, Ky., Aug. 4.—(AP)—After eight bodies had been recovered from the West Kentucky Coal Company's mine today, T. E. Jenkins, vice president, said no hope remained for the eight others missing.

Fire broke out in the mine this morning, adding to the hardships of rescuers.

Clay, Ky., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Three unidentified bodies were found early today by rescue workers in the Number 7 mine of the West Kentucky Coal Co., where an explosion occurred yesterday. The total known dead was seven, with nine men still missing.

The explosion occurred on the tenth entry of the mine. Rescue workers were hampered because all the brattices of the pit shaft were destroyed in the explosion. They were forced to construct new brattices as they went down.

Sixteen miners who were preparing to come to the surface when the explosion occurred were rescued last night.

Miners and officials believe that the explosion was the result of a "windy shot."

About 240 men are employed at the mine but only about 140 were at work at the time of the explosion.

Lita Grey Chaplin's Determined to Inject New Issue

Los Angeles, Aug. 4.—(AP)—An offer of approximately $1,000,000 failed to dissuade Lita Grey Chaplin in her determination for a finish fight in her suit for divorce from Charles Chaplin, L. Young, who until recently headed her legal staff, was revealed in support of his demand for attorney's fees.

Young, representing the legal firm which withdrew from the case as her counsel, testified yesterday that Mrs. Chaplin not only refused the cash settlement but remained insistent upon naming a "prominent motion picture actress" with whom she alleged Chaplin was unduly familiar. Several times the name of the actress has almost come to light, but legal complications have intervened. The case now is set for trial August 22.

The hearing was held to determine the amount of fees due to the firm of Young & Young, which withdrew from Mrs. Chaplin's side.

JEWELRY THEFT

Officers Find Jewels
on Persons of Two Complainants

Chicago, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A $30,000 jewel robbery report made to the police by two women after a cabaret party early today led to a mystery. The women, who said they were sisters, Mrs. J. B. Smith, of St. Louis, and Mrs. Mildred Cummings of Long Island, N. Y., listed three diamond rings valued at $10,000, two bracelets worth $10,000 and a diamond lavaliere valued at $5,000 as taken from Mrs. Cummings, while Mrs. Smith reported the loss of a $3,200 diamond ring.

Police said they found a diamond ring reported stolen from Mrs. Cummings in a handkerchief and hidden in Mrs. Smith's dress. In Mrs. Smith's purse, the police said they found a second large diamond ring and two smaller ones reported stolen from Mrs. Cummings, as well as a bar pin described as the property of Mrs. Cummings. Mrs. Smith also was in possession of the ring she had reported stolen.

Finds Conditions in West to be Average

Fred Manning of the I. N. U. Company returned several days ago from a month's trip through the west and along the Pacific Coast. He spent a week in Colorado, but his time was principally spent in California, especially in the Butter Basin, where he has relatives. Mr. Manning says the crops in this Basin are excellent. Wheat is going about fifty bushels to the acre. The fruit is plentiful and is now being shipped to Eastern markets. This Basin has 63,000 acres of fine land, all of which is irrigated by six electric pumps throwing 548,000 gallons of water every minute. He declares that business conditions in the principal cities of California are up with the average and labor conditions are at a par with other places in the mid-west.

LOWDEN HURRIES TO CHICAGO FOR POLITICAL TALK

Former Governor Non-Committal Regarding
His Candidacy

BULLETIN

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The committee organized to conduct a presidential boom for Frank O. Lowden, in Iowa, left last night for Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Frank O. Lowden, widely mentioned as republican presidential material, came to Chicago today to discuss politics with a group of friends.

"No man ever has run away from the presidency," reiterated Mr. Lowden, refusing to commit himself further as to the possibility of an announcement of his candidacy.

He went immediately to a hotel where he expected to meet the men who had urged him to leave his summer vacation for a political discussion.

GOT PHONE CALL

Alexandria Bay, N. Y., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois and prominently mentioned for the republican presidential nomination in 1928, left his summer home here for Chicago yesterday. He said he would return in a few days.

Shortly after President Coolidge issued his statement Tuesday, Mr. Lowden received a long distance telephone call from Chicago. It was believed here his trip might be for the purpose of conferring with the party leaders.

FRIEND OF DAWES

Chicago, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The Chicago Daily News said today that Vice President Dawes will not campaign for the presidency against Frank O. Lowden, but that if Lowden cannot be nominated and wants Dawes, Lowden will swing his support to the Chicago banker.

In this connection the newspaper set forth a hitherto unwritten history of the thirty years' friendship between Dawes and Lowden. The News recalled that when sponsors of the McNary-Haugen bill approved by Mr. Lowden were battling for a vote on the bill in the closing days of congress, Mr. Dawes effected a compromise which permitted a vote both on the farmers' bill and on a banking bill supported by their opponents.

Heavy Earthquake Felt

Los Angeles, Aug. 4.—(AP)—A heavy earthquake shook Los Angeles and suburbs at 4:22 a. m. today. The tremor was sharp in downtown office buildings, being a double shake with about ten seconds time from start to finish. Santa Monica reported a similar one. No damage was reported.

Pasadena and Hollywood and San Bernardino, sixty miles east, also felt the double shake. No damage was reported at any point.

He said he would make final tests for endurance and lifting power today.

BELIEF GROWS
THAT HE'S OUT
ABSOLUTELY

Friends Think He Has Eliminated Self Unequivocally.

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 4.—(AP)—The opinion that President Coolidge's statement that he does not "choose" to run in 1928 might have more than one meaning divided further here today and the belief had become almost positive that he had unequivocally eliminated himself from occupancy of the White House after March 4, 1929.

In some quarters, closest to Mr. Coolidge there is next to nothing being said, but when the information is put together, it becomes rather plain that no double meaning is accredited to the President.

Reasons for Belief

Several reasons for this belief come most prominently to the fore in Rapid City. It is pointed out, Mr. Coolidge could scarcely have used any other than the word "choose" in making his pronouncement and still keep the country from thinking him to be presumptive to the extent of believing the nomination next year actually was his. Had he said: "I will not run for President," he would have presumed, it is held, that the republican convention would nominate him.

It is argued further that if Mr. Coolidge had said "I will not be a candidate for the republican nomination in 1928," the same controversy would have arisen with the belief that the President was merely declaring himself not a candidate, but not that he would decline the nomination if forced upon him.

Second it is declared that by his statement, Mr. Coolidge closed the door to pledged delegates from some states, which hold their primary election before the national convention.

Lets Down Bars

Third, it is pointed out that the statement could in no way be construed as leaving the President in an easy position to go one way or another in the event the nomination was tendered him.

In addition the President, by making his pronouncement, was held to have tacitly assented to any other individual declaring himself a candidate and seeking support, because when he made his choice he must have appreciated that he could not expect the field to remain closed to others who do choose to run for President.

It is asserted finally that Mr. Coolidge gained nothing politically by making the announcement.

HERE'S NEW PHASE

Washington, Aug. 4.—(AP)—Whether President Coolidge would be eliminated from states primaries has added a new debatable phase to the speculation of political leaders and observers on the situation created by his announcement.

That the President's statement eliminates him from the primaries was the viewpoint of a Washington Jurist, Associate Justice J. A. Van Orsdal, expressed in an address at Beatrice, Neb. Mr. Coolidge by his announcement would perclude him from filing acceptance of nominations in such states, according to the Jurist.

Cursory interpretation of this angle, however, among congressional leaders, here, found little concurrence with the Justice's view.

FRANKLIN GR.
HOME BURNED
THIS MORNING

Occupants of Mrs. M.V.
Peterman House in Narrow Escape.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jeanguenat and Mrs. M. V. Peterman of Franklin Grove were forced to flee their home—the beautiful residence of Mrs. Peterman—in their night robes at 3 o'clock this morning when fire practically destroyed the building, which was one of the finest in Franklin Grove.

The fire, which was discovered by neighbors, is thought to have originated in the garage, which was a part of the dwelling, and into which Mr. Jeanguenat had driven his car a few hours previously on his return from a trip to Chicago. Whether a short circuit in the wiring or heat from the engine started the blaze will never be known, as the building and the automobile were destroyed by the flames.

Mrs. Peterman, mother of the states attorney of Ogle county, and sister of Dr. A. W. Chandler of Dixon, had been occupying the upper part of the home since the death of her husband, and had reaped the lower rooms to Mr. and Mrs. Jeanguenat.

When awakened by the alarm of their neighbors none had time to attempt the salvage of any clothing, and in fact it was with some difficulty that they escaped safely.

Neighbors were able to save a little of the furniture from the lower rooms, but practically all of the contents of the house were consumed by the flames, while the building was damaged beyond any salvage.

The loss is estimated at over $6,000.

BODY OF UNKNOWN MAN IS FOUND IN NORTH FORRESTON

Evidently Met Death
Under Wheels of
St. Paul Train

Forreston—The mangled body of a man apparently 22 years of age, was found Wednesday morning by section men in the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul yards at North Forreston. An initial "C" on a silver belt buckle was the only clue toward identification.

The man's left arm and right leg had been severed from the body. The fingers on the right hand also had been removed and the victim had suffered a skull fracture.

Dead Several Hours.

Because the victim had been dead several hours, Coroner J. C. Atkins, who took charge of the body, was unable to determine when the accident occurred. Several trains passed through the station and it is thought that the victim either fell or jumped from one of them. That other trains had passed over the mutilated body also was indicated by its condition.

The victim was fairly well dressed and apparently a foreigner.

BYRD'S JOURNEY
TO SOUTH POLE
WILL BE COSTLY

Expedition Will Cost
Quarter of Million
Possibly More

New York, Aug. 4.—(AP)—The New York Evening Post today says Commander Richard E. Byrd's scientific expedition into the Antarctic promises to be one of the most stupendous undertakings in history and will cost about a quarter of a million dollars.

Commander Byrd declared the sum really was conservative when measured against the size of the expedition, the distance supplies will have to be transported and the fact that two and perhaps three years will be required for its completion.

He said Edsel Ford will not be the sole backer. He said conferences have been arranged with other men who have been interested in the expedition and who have expressed a desire to back it financially.

The commander declined to reveal the names of the projected backers. What is more important, he said, is the extensive preparations that must be made before the flight to the South Pole, which, in itself, will not take more than a dozen hours at sea.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

Even in this so-called "enlightened day" many people prefer a miserable, bickering, stifling, degrading home life to divorce. If pushed for reasons, they plausibly blab something about "for the good of the child."

Clarence Darrow, who probably knows more about human beings than any other living person, takes a wallop at this idea in a recent article in which he upholds divorce when one or two persons is unhappy in the marriage. He says:

"The child that is brought up in a home where husband and wife are not congenial always suffers grievously from the situation."

Many times the man who makes a poor husband makes a poor father, and the woman who makes a poor wife also makes a poor mother, and it's up to the good husband or the good wife to grab the child away from the opposing party.

IT'S THE WOMAN

"It's the girls." This is the answer which Judge Charles A. Oberwager, a New York City magistrate, gives that question, "What's wrong with the times?"

The judge says that boys have not changed, but girls have. He blames all the troubles of today on the female of the species.

"The way the average girl dresses and conducts herself before boys is a direct incitement to evil," he opines.

Perhaps he's right, but he does not consider causes which might put a different hue upon modern feminine conduct.

The causes have to do with woman's floundering attempts to be an individual, a real person, after long centuries when she was regarded as nothing but a possession of some man, her father's or brother's or husband's. What more natural than that she makes a fool of herself until she is accustomed to her new status?

Few people drive a car very well the first few hours of its ownership, either.

ALIMONY FOR MEN

Alimony for men is just exactly as right as alimony for women, when conditions are the same, according to the National Woman's Party, which insists on the same rights and handicaps for both sexes.

Which is all balderdash! The entire principle of alimony, even if legal twists can get away from the original principal, is based on the fact that woman is the bearer and rearer of children and that her wage-earing capacities are necessarily impaired by this other capacity.

WHY BE LIKE 'EM?

Again the old question, why in the world should women want to be exactly like men? Two stories of women in the morning news make me wonder this more than ever. One is about Madame Nungesser, mother of the lost French trans-Atlantic flier. She declared that he lives and that she will see him again—"Mother instinct tells me so." Have men anything of wonder to substitute for such faith as this? And there is the story of a woman who, bequeathed several million dollars, will not accept it, "because it is not right." Does the male nature often perform a feat like that?

BUT—

Women, though, have many a vice compared with a male virtue.
Women, I think, are more selfish and individualistic than men and rarely care a cent about the neighbor and her children as long as they and their children are cared for. Observe women with children on a street car, at a theater box office, waiting in line anywhere. Watch them play unfair, shove and scowl and break all the rules of the game in order to care for their own first.
This is that "beautiful maternal instinct," of which we hear so much.

Beautiful Home Wedding Wednesday

Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Hollenbeck of Nelson, the marriage of their only daughter Florence, to James Hendryx of Bloomington, Ill., took place.

At 3 o'clock, Mrs. Ora Hendryx, cousin of the bride, sweetly sang, "I Love You Truly," playing her own accompaniment.

To the strains of the Lohengrin Wedding March played by Mrs. Edward Hollenbeck, sister of the bridegroom, the bridal couple took their places before a lovely background of ferns and potted plants, with little Betty Stevens as ring bearer—where they were met by Rev. Harry E.
Shiffer of Rock Falls, who performed the impressive ceremony in the presence of fifty relatives and friends.

The bride made a most attractive picture in her traveling suit of white flannel with black hat and accessories and wearing a boutonniere of green and white. The bridegroom wore the conventional black.

The home was beautifully decorated in green and white, with bouquets of daisies on the tables where refreshments were served by Misses Mary, Irma and Mildred Ransom and Miss Elsie Thome, intimate friends of the bride.

A pleasant feature of the occasion was the fact that this wedding day celebrated also the 34th wedding anniversary of the parents of the bride, who at that time established the present Hollenbeck home where the happy couple will reside for the present. As the couple drove away on their motor trip through central Illinois, the bride threw her bouquet which Miss Mary Ransom caught.

Many friends join in wishing Mr.
and Mrs. Hendryx many years of happiness and prosperity. They are both popular and highly respected young people.

The out of town guests included
Mr. and Mrs. George Hendryx of Bloomington; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hendryx of Peoria; Mr. and Mrs.
Wendell Wheeler of Peoria and Mrs.
and Mrs. George Detrick of Chicago;
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lawton and son Mervin, and Miss Lucy Cogswell of Dixon.

FACTORYIZING THE FARM.

Factoryizing the farm is one of the suggestion made to relieve the farmer of his burden under agricultural depression. Although this did not come from the farms some of the farm leaders seem to have adopted the idea to an extreme in evolving a cost system. President Coolidge was presented cost figures on products by a representative of a farm group, showing the following:

Corn, $1.42 a bushel; wheat, $2.42 a bushel; oats 70 cents a bushel; hogs, $16.32 a cwt.; chickens, 28 cents a pound; butterfat, 98 cents a pound; eggs, 61 cents a dozen.

It was added that this is 79 percent above the five-year average price received by farmers.

In this figuring the farm unit was allowed 5 percent interest on real estate investment, 7 percent on personal property, and a salary of $1800 a year to the farmer and his family. Interest rates adopted are fair and $1800 for work of a family 365 days is not high. The difference that may arise will hinge upon the real estate investment, upon the question of the actual value of the land and buildings. Cost of buildings can be definitely fixed. On one hand it may be said that the value of the land is based upon the returns possible at market prices. On the other hand it seems fair to fix the price where it was before the period of inflation of all commodities by war.

We are likely to confuse farm issues because of the different status of farmers. For instance, a farmer who owned an improved farm of 160 acres, unincumbered, before the war, was making a fair living if he received only the 5 percent on the land at $150 an acre, which is not a high price. With the provisions raised on the farm and the house to occupy, $1200 was a fair income, but we must remember that the man was worth $24,000 in the beginning and he could receive the $1200 or more in interest and do nothing if he sold the farm.

Across the road was the farmer who was paying interest on two-thirds of the cost of the farm at 5 to 6 percent. On the other side was the tenant, who paid rent based upon interest costs to the owner. So, we can not judge the prosperity of all farmers the same, any more than we can judge the prosperity of the man in town with a job and $24,000 to invest on the side on an equality with the man on salary with no capital.

Notwithstanding all of this, we think that if the farmer's dollar can be restored to the parity of 1912 with industry, transportation and labor, the man engaged in general farming will prosper without any fanciful flights as to his costs. In other words, without proof in hand that we are right, we are inclined to believe that the cost estimators are somewhat high.

Perhaps we can factoryize the farm to some extent, but we must realize that farming is done by the family unit and not on an hourly scale. Occasionally reference is made to idle seasons on the farms. The extent of idleness, of course, depends upon whether a man only raises a wheat crop or feeds stock. One might refer also to idleness in other occupations. There is the limited train, which runs 200 or 300 miles with only one or two stops. Shouldn't the train crew be engaged in running a knitting machine in a car ahead during the hours when there is nothing to do but ride. Could not the traveling men, who spend so much time on the train reading magazines, occupy their time by rolling cigars for the trade? Where do we go from here, when we begin requiring every person to occupy full time in production in order to make a living?

WASTED LIVES.

From the last tomes of a voluminous history of the World War written by Winston S. Churchill, British chancellor of the exchequer there is to be gleaned this illuminating paragraph:

"The war ended long before the material power of the United States could be brought to bear as a decisive or even as a principal factor. . . . If the physical power of the United States was not in fact applied in any serious degree to the beating down of Germany . . . the moral consequence of the United States joining the allies was indeed the deciding cause in the conflict."

Just so.

St. Mihiel and the Argonne were all for naught?

Tablets found in Babylonia show that banking was carried on there 5000 years ago. There's a good political job waiting for some archeologist who will dig up a tablet on Babylonian farm relief.

THE TINYMITES
STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

It didn't take the taffy boat so very long to safely float out on the whipped cream surface and then out of sight of land. The Tynmites all were filled with awe. Such wondrous things they never saw. The Taffy Man had gone from view with one wave of the hand.

"Oh, my," said Scouty, "this is great. I wonder how long we must wait before we come to land again, wherever that may be." "Well, what's the diff," Woppy cried. "We're safe as long as we're inside this taffy boat. But, say, I'd like to jump right in this sea."

"Let's do it then. I like whipped cream," said Carry. "I would be like a dream. Imagine eating all you want. I'm glad this sea was found." "Oh, don't jump in," snapped Scouty quick. "Cause too much cream might make you sick. Or, maybe this sea's very deep and all of us might drown."

Now Scouty, just by thinking twice, could always hand out good advice. The others quite agreed with him, so stayed aboard the ship. The sun was shining very strong when someone shouted, "Something wrong. Our boat is getting sticky, and the front's begun to dip."

The Tynmites were in a daze, for right beneath the bright sun's rays their taffy boat began to melt and spread out on the sea. "Oh, my! Oh, my!" the whole bunch cried. "This surely ends our lively ride. If this thing keeps on melting, where will all of us soon be?"

By now the smoke stack tipped a bit. The Tynmites had no place to sit. The seats around the taffy boat had slowly melted away. The whole bunch gazed, but no one spoke. They realized this was no joke. They wished that they were back on land where they could run and play.

(A submarine rescues the Tynmites in the next story.)

PAUL ADAMS
NIA SERVICE

It seemed very strange to lunch in the Hotel Simon, the leading cafe and restaurant on the main street of Romagne-sous-Montfaucon.

Mademoiselle Raymonde, Simon, the daughter of the proprietor, served and poured. She put a piece of red-checked oil cloth on the iron-legged table and aimed a graceful kick at a black cat that intended to get well within range of any bits of meat that might be offered. Sober-faced and demure, she brought in an omelet from the kitchen, dropped a couple of feet of bread, layed down a plate of pork chops and secured a bottle of wine from the silver-mounted bar.

Two kerosene oil lamps hung suspended from the ceiling. In one corner near the front window stood a phonograph. The only decorations on the walls were the advertising posters of "Dubonnet" and "Byrrh" and a huge sign: "No Fait Pas De Credit"—"Cash Only." An Italian laborer working on the reconstruction of a demolished house, stomped in—two Americans, assistant caretakers at the American cemetery, sat at a table reading a copy of a French newspaper.

Came the cheese—It was served on plates decorated with puzzle drawings—"Find the Hunter"—"Find The Deer In The Woods."

Mademoiselle Raymonde smiled a little then—just a fit of a smile. The black cat, sensing a possible change in her attitude, came over, sat down and looked up expectantly. The mademoiselle went into the kitchen for a conference with her mother on the bill. When she returned she had all the items of the lunch marked on a slate, which she presented. The total for three persons, was 46 francs—about $18.55.

The Italian laborer went out; so did the Americans. Mademoiselle Raymonde posed for a picture and smiled, just for an instant. Then she and her mother stood on the steps out in front and waved farewell.

SAINT and SINNER

Faith pretended to be asleep when Bob returned to their bedroom long after midnight. He undressed in the dark, tiptoeing carefully under the door, and swearing softly under his breath when he bumped into a chair. Her jumping nerves told her, even though her eyes were tightly closed, that he leaned over her for a moment, as if debating whether he should risk waking her by kissing her gently on forehead or cheek. She wanted with every quivering nerve in her body, to raise her arms and clasp his dear head to her breast, to feel his lips upon hers again, but something restrained her. She heard his faint sigh as he turned away, listened, with painfully beating heart, for the slight protesting squeak of springs as he lowered his body upon the hot sheets of the bed beside hers—very close beside hers, for it had been a cherished habit of theirs to go to sleep with hands clasped across the few inches dividing the beds.

She lay rigid now, fearful of moving lest he realize her deception. The minutes dragged like hours, as she heard him thrashing about upon the hot bed, as unable to sleep as she was. Suddenly a great and unbearable loneliness descended like a stifling pall upon her soul. There he was—her husband—lying so close to her and yet so far away that she had the panicky feeling that she would never see them again. The preacher who had married them had told them that they were "one" now. And here she lay, feeling as isolated as if she were the only living person in the world. Who was he—that man on the other bed, sighing heavily with despair or with distrust over the heat? He was a stranger to her, and she a stranger to him.

What was she thinking of? Bitter thoughts of disappointment and disillusion? Was he wondering why on earth he had married her—when he might have had brilliant, beautiful, gay little Cherry? Why, she could not even guess what he was thinking of, and he was dearer to her than anyone else in the world! How unfair, how tragic life was! And how essentially lonely every human being was, no matter how much beloved he might be!

She had wronged him, hurt him, disgusted him, and she could not even stretch out her hand to him across those few inches. So this was marriage! A constant hurting of each other, foolish little misunderstandings that the curious alchemy of marriage transformed into tragedies. She would never have dreamed of speaking to a friend or to a member of her family as she had spoken to Bob—and yet she loved Bob better than all the rest of them put together. What was it about marriage that brought out the worst side of your nature, that made you hurt most the person you loved best?

OUR BOARDING HOUSE

BY AHERNS

And oh, she loved him, loved him, loved him! And probably he would never feel the same toward her again—

A shuddering sob broke from her lips, starting her as much as it did the man in the other bed. She clasped her hand to her mouth, her whole body beginning to tremble violently. But before she had time to think, to speak, Bob had flung himself across the few inches that separated the beds and had seized her in his arms—fiercely, crushingly. And he was sobbing, the hard, hoarse sobs of a man not given to weeping. And as his body jerked with those hard sobs, his lips were moving hungrily over her face and neck.

"I made you cry, sweet. I made you cry! I'm a beast, darling! And I love you! God knows I love you! Why can't I make you happy? What is wrong with me, darling?" It was said in gasps, punctuated by those hard, dry sobs.

Tears streamed out of Faith's eyes. Her fingers gripped his shoulders hard. "It's not your fault, Bob! Oh Bob, what's the matter with me? I love you and I'm doing everything I can to drive you away from me!"

SWIFT TRAVELERS OF WATER AND SKY

Five world records for fast swimming were broken by Miss Martha Norellus in a single event of the National A. A. U. championships at Massachusetts, Long Island. Capturing the mile race from Ethel McGary, Miss Norellus set new marks for every turn from 500 meters upward. She finished the mile in 25:13; 2-5. The large photo shows Miss Norellus; inset, start of the race.

Three hundred miles an hour is the official flight record that Lieutenant Alford J. Williams of the U. S. Navy, pictured below, is seeking. A specially built plane, designed by himself, has just been built for his attempt. It will be driven by a 24-cylinder motor. Williams probably will represent the navy in the Schneider Cup races in Italy this year.

Beauty? Yes, But "It" Means More

The custom of glorifying mere beauty recently stirred up a rebellion in the University of Utah at Salt Lake City. A personality contest was decided upon and pictures of 46 co-eds were submitted to business men. They chose 15 and these 15 were sent to Elinor Glynn. Of the number the writer chose six who had "It." Margaret O'Rourke (above) led the list.

The truth came out when "Joe" was arrested in Toledo, O. On the other hand, Miss Virginia Purdue (right) of Richmond, Va., was held as a hobo at a Pittsburgh police station.

LASALLE CITY HISTORY TOLD ON BIRTHDAY

Today Marks Seventy-fifth Anniversary of Its Founding

LaSalle, Ill., Aug. 4.—(AP)—Economic and political vicissitudes delayed official organization of the city of LaSalle, which will celebrate its seventy-fifth birthday today, for nearly twenty years from the time the village was first laid out.

In 1838, when the terminus of the Illinois-Michigan canal was determined, LaSalle was laid out. Two years later, lots were sold at public auction. But not until 1852 was the city finally incorporated.

In commemoration of this incorporation, residents of this city have made extensive plans for celebration.

An old Indian trader, Simon Crozier, was supposed to be the first person to settle in the vicinity of the city, at an unknown time. It was not until 1830 that the actual settlements began.

In that year, Samuel Lapsley is credited with building the first cabin on the site of the city, which now would be between Fourth and Fifth streets. The next arrival was Burton Ayres, who built a cabin on a bluff near the city site and started a blacksmith shop.

The same year, two agents of a colonization company sent out from Northampton, Mass., reported back that the best point in the western country for a colony would be at the terminus of the Illinois and Michigan canal, which at that time was not decided upon, but which, it was believed, would be in the vicinity of Ayres smithy.

The fertility of the soil in this vicinity, the agents reported, was extraordinary, and immense coal beds were reported to be awaiting the miners' pick. Superior land and water connections were promised with the completion of proposed railroad lines.

Settlers began to drift inland soon and established a thriving little city called after the first explorer of the territory. But the spring of 1831 was wet, discouraging the settlers; and in 1832 the Black Hawk war broke out and many of the pioneers were massacred or driven from their homes. For a four year period LaSalle was almost a deserted village.

Then in 1836, the terminus of the canal was decided upon and LaSalle boomed. The city was laid out and lots were sold two years later, bringing good prices. From 1836 to 1840 was a period of great activity. Then came the crisis of 1840.

Work on the canal ceased. Value of state securities shrunk and the town of LaSalle was at a standstill with only the canal laborers and imprudent persons with insufficient funds to move left as residents.

There was one silver lining to this cloud—the laborers were forced to move to farms and the LaSalle district took on an agrarian aspect. New life was given the town when the LaSalle-Dixon railroad was chartered and when, in 1843 the legislature passed the act for the completion of the canal.

LaSalle grew steadily, so that in 1851 it was decided that the town was large enough to be incorporated. The issue was voted upon and the formal incorporation took place the following year.

When a Man Loves

By ALICE LOWE MILES

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
John Barrymore in "WHEN A MAN LOVES" is a Warner Bros. Picture
Production of this novel.

SYNOPSIS
Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood, but meets and loves Manon Lecourt, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, bargains her to Ravaur, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Ravaur. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravaur. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. On the eve of his ordination Manon confronts him and pleads for his love.

"Manon, can you promise that you would never leave me again?" Fabien searched her eyes.

"Darling—I know—I swear it!" her eyes answered him.
The agitation and tumult that her nearness kindled in Fabien thrilled him with a kind of horror that made him experience the vague sense of being carried into a new existence.

That is exactly what was happening and it came about with such power that he could no longer resist the call. As Manon's fragrant nearness broke down his last spark of resistance, Fabien gathered her hungrily into his starved arms and strained her to him in a strong passionate embrace. His lips found hers and held them for a wonderful moment of complete forgetfulness.

The reunited lovers were called from themselves by the chiming bells in the great Cathedral tower. "My dear, do you hear?" questioned Fabien happily. "Their ringing means my freedom, and yours!" He gathered Manon to him again for a brief ecstatic embrace, then removed his casock and left it on the ground—the only part of him that was to remain within the narrow confines of the cloister walls.

To be together was all they asked, and since holding Manon in his arms Fabien had not had a moment's doubt about the wisdom of again relinquishing his vows for her.

With one arm about Manon's shoulders, Fabien led her out into the world.

They agreed that their present and future happiness was secure beyond the reach of Fate or the interference of man; and so with one arm about Manon's slim shoulders Fabien led her out into the world.

Where? They neither knew nor cared. Just what awaited them did not matter so long as they had each other.

CHAPTER XV

Love with all its resulting pleasures is a wonderful thing, but unfortunately cannot be enjoyed for very long without enough money to insure food and shelter.

Fabien's hasty and unprepared departure from St. Sulpice did not leave time to think of money, and when he wanted to return for his purse Manon would not consider it. She feared complications and dreaded the thought of losing him again even for a moment. Anyway, the content of the purse would not have lasted long, for Fabien demanded nothing in the way of worldly goods while at St. Sulpice, and naturally his finances were never large. Now, however, money was as essential to their future as the food their bodies required.

Manon had salvaged enough from the odious but profitable days with the Comte De Ravaur to take care of them for some time. Of course she offered it immediately as a solution to their problem and was surprised when Fabien rebelled at the abhorrent idea.

It took only a little explaining on Fabien's part to make her understand why they could not exist on the Comte's past generosity. Manon acceded to his wishes very graciously; in fact, nothing mattered now that they were together with the past all explained and buried away. She assigned herself unreservedly to Fabien's care and instinctively knew that in some way he would provide everything her heart desired.

Fabien was even more sure of this than Manon. He had lost her once because he was so absorbed in dreams of love that he ignored the material. Now he planned to provide for her even more lavishly than had the Comte, so that no odious comparison would ever make Manon unhappy or cause him to fall in her estimation as a man and provider.

The only means at hand was for Fabien to draw on his father and he did it with a heavy hand because he knew that after his parent had been notified a second call for funds would be refused.

To satisfy Manon's love for pleasure it seemed important that they should reside in Paris. She found a beautiful place that she wanted, consequently Fabien took it and they established themselves in gorgeous style with utter disregard for expense; nor did they take time from love making to think where more money would come from when their dwindling supply was exhausted.

They were enjoying a dream, and money never matters in a dream, so why should they have worried? Besides, all dreams end soon enough. It is stupid to attempt control, just give yourself up completely to the temporary oblivion and make the best of the rude awakening.

The flying weeks added a new radiance to love. Manon grew so sweet in her unceasing attentions to Fabien that he felt fully rewarded for his past troubles and changed plans. Her passion for jewelry and beautiful gowns went hand in hand with her love for amusement and she soon discovered that Fabien gratified every whim.

Smart new friends became frequent visitors at the Des Greux household. It happened that many of the same, who had witnessed the dramatic scene between Fabien and Manon at the Gambling Club, annexed themselves to the host of friends and admirers. Strangely enough, one of the most faithful from this group was Nana. It may have been because she found Manon's salon the best place in Paris to meet interesting men, but we will give her credit for a flash of real friendship and add for good measure that she no longer treasured a grudge against Fabien—instead she openly admired him and would have given her soul to hold the place in his affections that Manon occupied. She openly and secretly, when occasion permitted, angled for his attention and her efforts were so untiring that Fabien often had to make excuses to get away from her.

Manon's boudoir was lovely beyond compare. Panelled walls of soft rose colored satin matched the exquisite hangings. All of her toilet articles were of crystal and gold, a gift from Fabien that made her lavish carresses on him for a whole year.

The bed was charming, but not more so than its occupant as the brightness from the mid-day sun filtered through the windows and shone brightly upon Manon as she sat there, banked with silken pillows, enjoying her breakfast chocolate, while Fabien, who had been up for hours, came in to watch her. "Your hair is so soft and lovely," said Fabien, tenderly patting the mass of golden ringlets spread out on the pillows around her head. "I like you much better this way than in a formal wig. It reminds me of our first night in the attic room when I saw you asleep."

Fabien buried his face in Manon's curls and as her sweetness took possession of his senses he kissed her—many times—while she pillowed his head upon her breast and bowed her head in adorable submission.

A knock at the door warned them that it was time for Manon's day to begin. Late night hours made it advisable for her to remain abed until noon and Fabien always came in to wake her and remain until the maid arrived to dress her bath.

By the time the door opened, Fabien was way out in the middle of the room talking casually with Manon as she, just as casually, finished her chocolate. It was a little game of hoax they always enjoyed. Although it concealed nothing for the simple reason that the maid was Marie—the wise gossip loving slavey from the pension. It had been another whim of Manon's to engage her as personal maid and costume her in all the neatness of a pretty uniform. Marie arose to the occasion grandly and watched her adored mistress as jealously as a devoted watch dog. The new surroundings also gave her hungry soul a feast and she found the large servants' hall an amazing place for scandal.

"Messieurs the Abbe Martineau and the Duke D'Enfermont—Mademoiselle Nana—and the hairdressers are waiting to see Madam" Marie made her announcement very stiffly, while now and then she cast a grim look at Fabien. Now she did not like him because she was forced to change her opinion about his appearance and his wealth.

CHANCERY.
State of Illinois, Lee County, ss. In the Circuit Court, September term, 1927. Joseph T. Rutters, Catherine M. Rutters, In Chancery, Gen. No. 4722

Affidavit of non-residence of Catherine M. Rutters. Impleaded with the above defendant, having been filed in the Clerk's office of the Circuit Court of Lee County, notice is therefore hereby given to the said non-resident defendants that the Complainant filed his bill of complaint in a mean little house in a mean little Missouri town. A gray coffin of cheap painted wood, resting on two cheap pine chairs, which her mother had painted black and orange. A child—herself at nine—crouching on the floor at the head of the coffin, tears streaming out of her eyes, slipping down over her pinched, freckled little face.

She heard her grief-hoarse, frightened voice crying out, "Mama! Mama!" and again, as if she were living the scene for the first time, she heard with startling clearness the rough whiplash of her father's voice:

"Get out o' here and make me a pot o' coffee! Ain't a damn bit o' sense in a great big girl like you whining and taking on for two days on a stretch. Your ma ain't coming back, for all your blubbering, and the quicker you take on some o' her work the better you'll be. Get out o' here now, and stir up a batch o' biscuits, too. I ain't had a mouthful o' food but what the neighbors brought in since she was took!"

"No, no! I don't want to remember!" the girl moaned, her lovely head worrying the pillow in desperation.

But she could not shut the flood-gates of memory. She saw herself cooking greasy meals and cleaning the mean little house, oversteering her slight strength so that her father would not beat her. Then she saw herself alone for days, too frightened to tell the neighbors that her father had deserted her, so terrified with loneliness that she would have welcomed his coarsest handsome, drink-ravaged face and his brutal voice. Then she saw herself standing before a big-bosomed woman in the orphan asylum, trying to shrink into herself, hating herself for being so little and pinched and ugly. She heard the other children taunting her, "Greeney eyes! Freckle-face!"

Aunt Flora had been in Europe when Vivian's mother died. It was Aunt Flora, newly married to her second husband—Jack Preston, who now wanted to marry Aunt Flora again—who came to the orphan's home to rescue her thirteen-year-old niece.

Beautiful, glittering, glamorous Aunt Flora, wrapped about with her husband's love as with a shining cloak. Aunt Flora saying, "This can't be Vee-Vee—Grace's baby! Why, Jack, Grace was the loveliest thing! Much prettier than I am!"

Later she had heard Aunt Flora saying to Jack Preston: "The poor little thing is so pitifully plain, Jack. It will be a miracle if she ever marries!"

Vera wondered, sobbing a little with self-pity, if it had been any wonder that she had never had gay good times like other girls, handicapped as she had been by her own knowledge of her plainness and by her aunt's thoughtless prophecy. Her pride, trampled but not killed by life in the orphan's home, had made her fiercely determined not to accept her aunt's bounty any longer than was absolutely necessary. She had studied far into the night, had earned the contemptuous reputation of being a bookworm and a dig and teacher's pet, but she had plowed grimly through high school in three years, and had then worked for two years—until she was eighteen—in a Fourteenth street department store in New York, saving her money for a business course. And at nineteen she had gone to work as a stenographer, savagely determined to be the best private secretary in New York. If love and marriage were not for her, she would force life to give her the next best thing—success. She had lived alone much of the time, working overtime in every job she had held, cooking her own frugal meals, making her own dowdy dresses, studying.

Intermittently, between her aunt's marriages, she had lived with her, sharing the expenses of the tasteful little apartment which Aunt Flora's alimony or, if the husband had died, his insurance money and savings provided. Aunt Flora had never married a rich man; her four marriages had been love matches. And between them, while she was waiting to fall in love again, she had wheedled Vera into staying with her, because she feared loneliness more than anything in the world except old age. But the price that Vera had paid for a more comfortable home and more esthetic surroundings had been heavy, for Flora Cartwright had unconsciously nursed the girl's feeling of inferiority, had convinced her anew every day of their life together that she, Vera Victoria Cameron, was not made for love and marriage.

And now, through a miracle wrought by Jerry Macklyn, she was beautiful, she was desirable.

But—would it happen? She had fallen in love so ridiculously with a man she had never seen before, a man who had looked through her as if she did not exist. She was like her mother, who had fallen in love with John Cameron the first time she had seen him at a country dance, had married him the next day, throwing up her job as a school teacher in the little Missouri town. She was like Aunt Flora, who boasted that she had fallen in love at sight with every man she had married. It was in her blood—this reckless plunging into love, this mad impulse to fly after the beloved and capture him at any cost.

She went to sleep, murmuring Jerry's name. But the face of which she dreamed was dark, aristocratic, heartbreakingly handsome.

The next morning, after dressing herself with almost prayerful carefulness, she had a leisurely, expensive breakfast in the dining car, deferentially attended by the chief steward himself, and glisteningly conscious of every admiring glance that the diners—men and women, both—cast at her.

The train reached the little station of Minnetonka at half-past eleven. During the three-mile drive to the hotel on the lake Vera became painfully conscious that at least two of her fellow-passengers were regarding her with more than usual interest and curiosity. They were a young couple, fashionably dressed, evidently married.

Vera, out of the corner of her eye, saw the woman whispering to her husband, glancing from the initials on Vera's bag to her face. The husband shook his head at first, smiling indulgently, then, on looking more closely at the embarrassed girl who tried to pretend ignorance of their scrutiny, he nodded slowly, his eyes narrowing with speculation.

"I wonder what's wrong with me," Vera worried. "Am I too well dressed, or not well enough dressed, or what? But they act as if they thought they recognized me. Oh, well, it's silly to worry. If my own aunt didn't recognize me after my transformation, I don't see how they could."

But she was growing more worried every minute. Fear froze her into a statue of arrogance. What if they did see through her—recognized her as a stenographer on a two-weeks' vacation playing the great lady? Would they try to have her put out of their sacred hotel?

Vera encounters the man of her dreams—Schuyler. And this time he does not look through her, but at her.

JERRY MACKLYN, advertising manager for the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co., proposes to VERA CAMERON, his secretary, that he transform her from the old-maid type she is into a beauty with the use of the company cosmetics and that her photographs, taken during the experiment, be used in Peach Bloom advertising.

Vera indignantly refuses but when she falls suddenly in love with a man whom she hears called SCHUYLER, she feels the need to be beautiful above everything else. She overhears Schuyler say he will be in Lake Minnetonka in June and Vera resolves to go there.

JOHN N. GALLISATH

(Contributed)

The funeral services of John N. Gallisath were held at his late residence, 2111 Cumberland street, Rockford, Ill., Wednesday afternoon, July 27th at three o'clock. Interment was made in the Greenwood cemetery.

John N. Gallisath died at his home on Monday afternoon after a lingering illness of a complication of diseases of four years duration.

Mr. Gallisath was born at Mendota, Ill., on December 10, 1853, and spent his childhood days there. In later years he was engaged in farming near Compton, Ill. Six years ago he retired and moved to Rockford where he resided until his death.

October 14, 1911, he was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Schlager of Rockford. To this union one child was born, Veri, now 12 years of age.

Rev. William Shimmeln, assistant pastor of the Centennial M. E. church, officiated at the services. Mrs. Lila Lohman and Miss Dorothy Leet sang "Lead Kindly Light" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere." Pallbearers were very close friends and were men who had spent many hours with our departed brother trying to help cheer him through his suffering of four years.

John leaves to mourn his departure from this earthly life, his wife and daughter, Veri, his mother, Mrs. R. Gallisath, one brother, Clarence A., of Rockford, and three sisters, Mrs. L. Larson, also of Rockford, Mrs. Chas. Walters of Compton, Ill., and Mrs. E. Mettillie of Winnipeg, Canada. He also leaves a large number of relatives and as friends he leaves every one with whom he ever came in contact for to enumerate his friends would be to enumerate his acquaintances.
